

Abstract

The invention concerns a packaging material comprising two layers delimiting between them a cavity. A substance capable of retaining gas therein is housed in the cavity and one of the layers is permeable to gas ethylene and impermeable to water vapour.